PRESS RELEASE: FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Launch of Benjamin Franklin House Literary Prize 2009 in association with The Telegraph

Those who would give up essential liberty to purchase a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety' Benjamin Franklin

The Benjamin Franklin House Literary Prize is endowed by Benjamin Franklin House Chairman John Studzinski a leading executive and philanthropist.

Benjamin Franklin is one of history's great figures. While he made lasting contributions in many fields, his first passion was writing. He believed in the power of the written word to inform and stimulate debate – as the bedrock of a democratic society.

This year a question or quote exploring Franklin's relevance in our time is open for interpretation in 1000-1500 words by two groups: young people and professional writers. The winner of the Young Writers Prize will receive £500 while the winner of the Professional Writers Prize will receive £1000 with publication of their essays in the British Daily Telegraph, and at www.BenjaminFranklinHouse.org. Entries for 2009 must be received before 30 September.

For nearly sixteen years between 1757 and 1775, Franklin lived at 36 Craven Street in the heart of London, England. He is one of history's great polymaths - a diplomat, patriot, scientist, inventor, philosopher and more. He was one of the first American journalists, writing prolifically not only on politics and foreign affairs, but on science, the arts and humanity.

In 2006, Benjamin Franklin House, the world's only remaining Franklin home, opened to the public for the first time as a dynamic museum and educational facility. See www.BenjaminFranklinHouse.org.

2009 Franklin quote for interpretation: Benjamin Franklin famously said "Those who would give up essential liberty to purchase a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety." Entrants should interpret this quote for its significance today.
